明代设立官窑后,新品种不断,在彩瓷方面,宣德青花五彩开创了釉下青花和釉上五彩结合的先河;成化斗彩以其精巧的制作和高雅的装饰成为一代楷模;明代中期以后又创烧了素三彩等品种。清康熙以后,随着官窑的全面恢复,珐琅彩引入瓷器装饰,成为极名贵的宫廷用器。

珐琅彩仿制铜胎珐琅器,其特点为通体满绘,先高温烧成坯子,而后运至北京宫廷内彩绘、彩烧。清康熙珐琅彩成为中国陶瓷史上的重要成就之一。

After the official porcelain kilns were built in the Ming Dynasty, porcelain products sprouted up in various new types. Among coloured porcelains for example, the porcelains with green designs and five-colours during the reign of Xuande took the initiative to combine the green designs beneath the glaze with the five-coloured paintings on the glaze; the "Dou Coloured" ware (with juxtaposed colours) during the reign of Chenghua set an example of the time with its exquisite manufacture skills and elegant decoration; products such as tri-plain-coloured glazed pottery were formulated as of the middle of the Ming Dynasty. With the full-length restoration of official kilns after the reign of Kangxi of the Qing Dynasty, the enamel colour was brought in on the decoration of porcelains, which then became very famous and precious utensils used by the imperial family.

The mock enamel ware with a copper liner is characteristic of its paintings that cover it all round. Its blank was first made by burning in high temperature and then was transported to the imperial court in Beijing for colour painting and colour burning. The enamel coloured ware during the reign of Kangxi was among the most important achievements in the history of Chinese ceramics.
