1 Hung and Quang are talking about famous people. Listen and read.

Hung: The topic for tomorrow's presentation is really interesting. Have you decided who to talk about, Quang?

Quang: Not yet. I'm still wavering between two famous people, Steve Jobs and Michael Jackson. I admire them both.

Hung: But who's had a greater impact on you?

Quang: I'm not sure ... Steve Jobs's work stimulates my creativity and innovation, while Michael Jackson's music inspired me to learn to play a musical instrument. What do you think?

Hung: Well, both of them were very talented and influential, but I prefer Steve Jobs. I think Michael Jackson was a great dancer, but not an excellent singer. In his later years, his singing voice became weak and thin and wasn't as good as before.

Quang: I see. What about you? Who are you going to talk about?

Hung: Christine Ha.

Quang: You mean ... the lady who won the US MasterChef trophy in 2012?

Hung: That's right.

Quang: I know your dream is to become a famous chef. Is that why you want to talk about her?

Hung: Yes. What's more, Christine is a blind chef and a gifted writer. She's very talented and determined. It was absolutely amazing to watch her use all the kitchen tools and prepare the dishes.

Quang: I agree. I remember how excited I felt when Christine was creating those great-looking dishes ... and even anxious when the judges were tasting them. By the way, do you know where she was born? In Viet Nam or the US?

Hung: In California, but she was inspired by memories of her mum's cooking.

Quang: It seems you know quite a lot about her. Good luck with your presentation tomorrow!

Hung: The same to you!

2 Read two people's life stories and complete the table with facts about them.

Name	Larry Stewart	Le Thanh Thuy
Born
Died
Nationality
Health problem
Dedicated life to ...

Larry Stewart came from humble beginnings. Born in Mississippi in 1948, he was brought up by his grandparents. In 1971, Larry found himself jobless and starving for several days. After a free meal given by a restaurant's owner, he vowed to help others whenever he could.

Larry then moved to Kansas City, where he was fortunate enough to make money in cable television. He began helping the less fortunate in 1979, and stories of 'Secret Santa' started to emerge from the city. For over 26 years, he handed out thousands of dollars every Christmas to the needy in public places – without ever revealing his identity. The more he gave, the more stories of his generosity spread across the United States. Secret Santa became famous, yet still anonymous.

He kept his identity hidden until 2006, when he was diagnosed with cancer, which later claimed his life. Since Larry Stewart's death in 2007, his example has inspired others to continue his mission of kindness and charitable work.

Born in 1988, Le Thanh Thuy was awarded the title 'Ho Chi Minh City Outstanding Young Citizen' in 2006, a year before she passed away. As soon as Thuy started high school in 2003, she was diagnosed with bone cancer and doctors decided to amputate her leg to save her life.

Thuy's repeated hospitalisations over four years did not stop her from helping other patients. Her dream was to initiate a fund to help young cancer patients. Whenever Thuy could move around, she organised different charity activities to relieve the young patients' pain. Thuy's meaningful work was welcomed and supported by the community. As a result, Thuy's Dream Programme was launched and is currently managed by The Tuoi Tre.

The Tuoi Tre has continued to hold annual events to support her programme. The most important one is the Sunflower Festival, where children and their families get together and have fun. Gifts are given to the young patients, and the memory of Thuy is kept alive by her story about love and sharing.

The creator of Sherlock Holmes

1 Read the text about Arthur Conan Doyle and decide whether the statements about it are true (T), false (F), or not given (NG). Tick the correct boxes.

Arthur Conan Doyle

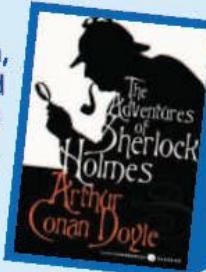

Sir Arthur Ignatius Conan Doyle was a Scottish writer and physician. He is best known for his creation of Sherlock Holmes – a brilliant London-based detective famous for his logical thinking and ability to solve difficult cases.

Born in Edinburgh in 1859 into a prosperous family, Doyle was strongly influenced by his mother, who was a well-educated woman. In his early childhood, she used to tell him vivid stories which sparked his imagination. The second person who had a great impact on his writing career was Dr Joseph Bell, a professor at the medical school where Doyle studied from 1876 to 1881. Dr Bell's keen powers of observation later inspired Doyle to create his fictional detective character, Sherlock Holmes.

Doyle's active life provided him with vivid experiences for his stories. With a great love for adventure, he would never miss a chance to travel. He took a surgeon's position on a whaling ship sailing for the Arctic Circle. He served as a volunteer doctor in the Langman Hospital in South Africa during the War of Independence in 1900. He also acted as a war journalist during the First World War.

Doyle's writing career started during his time at medical school. After graduation, he set up his own medical practice, which was not very successful initially, so he started writing stories again while waiting for patients. He wrote 21 novels and more than 150 short stories. He also published poems, articles, memoirs and plays on various subjects. His most well-known works are the novels and stories with Sherlock Holmes and the fantasy novel The Lost World, which were made into successful films.

Doyle died at the age of 71, after a heart attack. In his honour, a statue of him was built in Crowborough, where he lived for almost 23 years.

1. Arthur Conan Doyle's stories about Sherlock Holmes were the first detective stories in the world.
2. The two people who had a strong influence on Doyle's writing career were his mother and Dr Joseph Bell.
3. Doyle's mother inspired him to write about Sherlock Holmes.
4. Doyle's life experiences were sources for many of his stories.
5. The Lost World and his novels and stories about Sherlock Holmes were made into films.
6. A statue of Sherlock Holmes was built in London.

 Lan and Nam are discussing the plan for their presentation on urbanisation. Listen and read.

Nam: Hi, Lan!

Lan: Hello, Nam. Do you know if our Geography teacher has fixed the date for our presentation on urbanisation?

Nam: It's next Friday. It's time we finalised the content. How long should we talk?

Lan: Well, it is recommended that the presentation be no more than 15 minutes. There is also a five-minute Q&A session.

Nam: Well, we'd better work together or we might not prepare well for it.

Lan: You're right. I think we should start with the definition of urbanisation and perhaps mention some of its causes, such as lack of resources in rural areas and better work opportunities in urban areas.

Nam: I agree. But before we provide the definition, we should show some thought-provoking photos to illustrate urbanisation in our country. Visuals will grab the attention of our audience and keep people engaged.

Lan: That's a great idea. I'll start looking for some interesting images. What about the body of our presentation? We have a lot of information ...

Nam: Yes, there's a lot to say, but I suggest that we focus on its advantages and disadvantages.

Lan: I agree. We should also provide some examples.

Nam: Yes, this will help listeners to understand our points better.

Lan: Our Geography teacher also advised that we talk about issues that are familiar and important to our classmates.

Nam: So, do you think we should stick to urbanisation in Viet Nam?

Lan: Well, this should be the main part as our audience will be very interested in knowing more about it, but we could also mention urbanisation in well-known places like the UK and USA where most of the population now lives in urban areas.

Nam: Yes, it's important that we talk about how developed countries have solved the urbanisation problems and propose some solutions to those in Viet Nam.

Lan: That would be interesting, but it would make our presentation too long. We shouldn't overload people with information or else they'll just switch off. We could instead mention some solutions and government initiatives in the conclusion.

Nam: Well, is it really necessary that we include new information in the conclusion? We should just summarise the main points.

Lan: OK, but we still need to do some research on the solutions. People may ask us during the Q&A session.

Nam: I agree. So, shall we start creating the PowerPoint slides then and ...?

Joe: I've just come back from the city.

Mike: Did you take the train?

Joe: Yes, but it took five hours! The journey was really slow and it was so noisy and crowded.

Mike: Well, trains are still slower than coaches.

Joe: Sure. They should replace them with new, high-speed trains. Next time I'll go by coach. And how are you?

Mike: Well, life hasn't changed much for me. I still live and work on my farm with my wife, but my sons and daughters have all moved to the city.

Joe: So you really like it here in the countryside?

Mike: Yes, I do. I keep hearing about all the crimes, noise and pollution in big cities, especially in the industrial zones. My wife is so worried about our children that she calls them almost every day!

Joe: They're young and the city life is more interesting for them. They will also have better career prospects.

Mike: Yes, I agree. They have managed to find well-paid jobs and are really enjoying life there.

SKILLS

READING

Urbanisation and its causes

1 You are going to read a text about urbanisation. Predict whether the following statements are true (T) or false (F).

1. Urbanisation happened first in more economically developed countries, then in less economically developed countries.
2. Urbanisation has increased in rich countries since 1950s.
3. Lack of resources in rural areas is one of the factors leading to urbanisation in less developed countries.
4. The standard of living in cities and rural areas is more or less the same.
5. By 2050, more than two thirds of the world's population are expected to live in urban areas.

2 Read the text and check your predictions in 1.

Urbanisation is the process by which urban areas grow bigger as more and more people leave the countryside to live in towns and cities.

Before the 1950s, urbanisation mainly occurred in more economically developed countries (MEDCs). Rapid urbanisation happened during the period of industrialisation in Europe and North America in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. A lot of people left their home villages for urban areas hoping to find jobs in the rapidly expanding industries in big towns and cities. Since 1950s urbanisation has become slower in most MEDCs. Now, some of the biggest cities are losing population because people go back to live in rural areas. This is known as counter-urbanisation.

Since 1950, urbanisation has grown rapidly in LEDCs (Less Economically Developed Countries) in Asia, Africa and South America. Between 1950 and 1990, while the urban population in LEDCs doubled, the increase was less than half in developed countries.

There are various causes of urbanisation in LEDCs. Here are some major ones. First, people migrate to urban areas on a massive scale due to lack of resources in rural areas. Second, small farmers find it harder to make a living not just because of bad weather conditions such as drought, floods, or storms, but because they can't compete with large agricultural companies. These are considered 'push' factors.

People living in rural areas are also 'pulled' to cities, which are known to be places of financial centres, services, wealth and opportunities. Believing that the standard of living in urban areas will be higher than in rural areas, many people come to the city seeking their fortune.

Today, about half of the world's population lives in urban areas. Urbanisation has provided job opportunities, higher incomes and better access to health facilities and education. The urban population will continue to grow and it is expected that its proportion will increase to 70% by 2050.

3 Find the words in the text that have the following meanings. Write the words in the space provided.

2. the movement of people out of cities to the surrounding areas
3. became twice as big or twice as many
4. a rise in size, amount or degree
5. go to live in another area or country

4 Read the text carefully. Answer the following questions.

1. What is urbanisation?
2. What do MEDCs and LEDCs stand for?
3. Where did rapid urbanisation take place prior to 1950? Why?
4. What happened after 1950?
5. What are some of the 'push' factors of urbanisation?
6. Why are small farmers' lives difficult?
7. What are some of the 'pull' factors of urbanisation?

5 Discuss with a partner.

How has your area been affected by urbanisation?

SPEAKING

Life in big cities

1 Read a conversation between two friends about life in big cities. What features do they mention? Are they positive or negative?

Minh: Ha, I don't know why so many people are moving from their home villages to big cities these days! They've become so overcrowded.

Ha: Yeah, I agree. They're really overpopulated. But lots of people still want to become city dwellers.

Minh: Well, I'm quite happy in my home village. It's important that some people stay in rural areas and work in agriculture.

Ha: But there are more employment opportunities in the city. Don't you want to get a high-paying job in an office instead of working on your parents' farm? Your standard of living will be higher in the city.

Minh: I'm not sure; not everyone is lucky. Big cities are flooded with people from rural areas. Many of them are jobless and have to live in slums. I'd rather live in my village.

Ha: You're right. It's essential that the government should build big cities and upgrade the infrastructure in rural areas.

Culture

Urbanised Bangkok

1 Look at the two photos of Bangkok, Thailand. What aspects of city life do they show?

2 Read the text about urbanisation in Bangkok. Answer the questions that follow.

As the capital city of Thailand for over 200 years, Bangkok has an important role to play. Its growth is the world's window on the growth of Thailand. Its urbanisation rate has increased gradually over the past 50 years, bringing apparent and wide-ranging benefits to the country. These include economic, social and cultural ones. In terms of economic benefits, the national income statistics have shown that Bangkok and the surrounding areas usually generate more than 50% of the gross domestic product. Regarding the social benefits, Bangkok's inhabitants have access to better services and facilities compared to any other area of the country. Moreover, as a national centre of art and culture, Bangkok provides many opportunities and facilities for leisure and sport activities, and entertainment.

However, urbanisation has also resulted in massive problems. For example, thousands of migrants live in the modern slums surrounded by poverty, crime and drugs, and with no hope of getting a job. Traffic congestion is another big problem in the city whose road system is unable to cope with the increased number of cars. The traffic congestion combined with the large concentration of factories has severely affected the air and water quality. Despite the problems, Bangkok still continues to attract more and more migrants every year. The problems of traffic congestion, pollution and urban slums will continue to grow worse if the government does not take any measures to reduce the negative effects of urbanisation.

1. What is the role of Bangkok in Thailand?
2. What benefits has urbanisation brought about?
3. What problems has urbanisation caused?

3 Discuss the question below.

What are the similarities and differences between the urbanisation in Bangkok and that in Ha Noi?

- Maria: Some of the participating schools have also decided to use green cleaning products, which are safer since they do not release harmful chemicals into the environment.
- Kevin: It sounds interesting, but I'm still not sure how students like me can contribute to your campaign.
- Mai: You can start by simply checking for mould and mildew, and cleaning surfaces with natural products such as vinegar, lemon juice or olive oil. Find out if any hazardous chemicals are used for cleaning at your school and start campaigning for their disposal and replacement with eco-friendly products.
- Maria: Chemicals can affect the air quality and cause health problems like asthma and skin rashes. You can also organise cleaning days to remove any clutter and keep airflow pathways clear in your household or school.

Black carbon pollution

- 1 Look at the pictures. Match the pictures with the appropriate word or phrases.

soot diesel vehicle melting of the Arctic

1.

2.

3.

- 2 Read the following article about soot pollution. Choose the appropriate heading (a-d) for each paragraph.

- a. Soot and global warming
- b. The effect of soot on human health
- c. The origin of soot
- d. Ways to reduce soot emissions

Nowadays we know a lot about the link between carbon dioxide (CO₂) emissions and global warming. However, we seem to be unaware of one very dangerous pollutant, soot, also called black carbon.

Soot comes from the incomplete combustion of coal, oil, wood and other fuels. In other words, diesel engines, vehicle exhaust pipes, farming machines, construction equipment, or simply fires in grills, fireplaces, and stoves are potential sources of soot. It appears in our daily life and can easily affect every one of us.

2.

Soot like all black things absorbs sunlight and heats up the atmosphere. According to recent research, it is the second most damaging greenhouse gas after CO₂, and twice as harmful to the climate. Although black carbon remains in the atmosphere for no more than seven days, it is particularly damaging to frozen areas. Soot emissions might be responsible for the quick melting of the Arctic. Controlling black carbon can help to slow down global warming.

3.

Soot does not only have an impact on global warming and climate change, but is also unhealthy. A soot particle is very tiny – smaller than dust and mould, and about 1/30 the width of a human hair. It can easily go into our bloodstream and lungs via the nose and throat. As a result, breathing in the tiny particles can cause asthma attacks, heart disease, bronchitis and many other respiratory illnesses.

Large quantities of man-made soot enter the atmosphere every year. The effects are most damaging regionally, especially in South and East Asia, Latin America and parts of Africa. In developing countries, reducing soot emissions can be achieved by replacing traditional stoves with clean, alternative fuel cookers and heaters. Installation of filters to remove black carbon from diesel vehicles can also reduce soot. Changing to electric or hydrogen vehicles will also reduce the impact on the environment.

In conclusion, reducing black carbon will have immediate benefits in slowing down global warming and the melting of the Arctic snow and ice. It would also prevent many soot-related deaths and illnesses.

3 Work in pairs. Complete each of the following sentences with no more than five words.

1. We know about carbon dioxide and its impact on global warming, but we _____.
2. Soot comes from the burning of coal, _____.
3. Black carbon is the _____ after carbon dioxide.
4. Soot particles can be easily breathed in because they are _____.
5. People can reduce black carbon emissions at home by using _____ for cooking and heating.

Advantages and disadvantages of going green

- 1 Read the incomplete essay about the advantages and disadvantages of green energy. Use the ideas in the following boxes to complete the second and third paragraphs.

Using green energy
Advantages	Disadvantages
renewable energy, minimal impact on the environment, low cost of operation	expensive to build and install, unreliable supply, difficult to generate in large quantities

As the world population is growing bigger and bigger, our energy demands are also growing. Governments and organisations have been trying to find new sources of energy to replace the fossil fuels which are running out. One of the solutions is to use green energy including solar, hydro, wind, geothermal, ocean and biomass. However, there are both advantages and disadvantages to this.

One major advantage is that they are renewable

While it is easy to see the environmental advantages of using green energy, we must also recognise some of the disadvantages. First,

In conclusion, there are both advantages and disadvantages to the use of green energy. Hopefully, many of the disadvantages of these renewable sources of energy will be successfully removed through technological development and research, and they will be exploited fully to replace the fossil fuels.

The greenest countries and cities in the world

1 Quickly read the text and answer the questions that follow.

A GREEN PLACE TO LIVE AND ENJOY LIFE

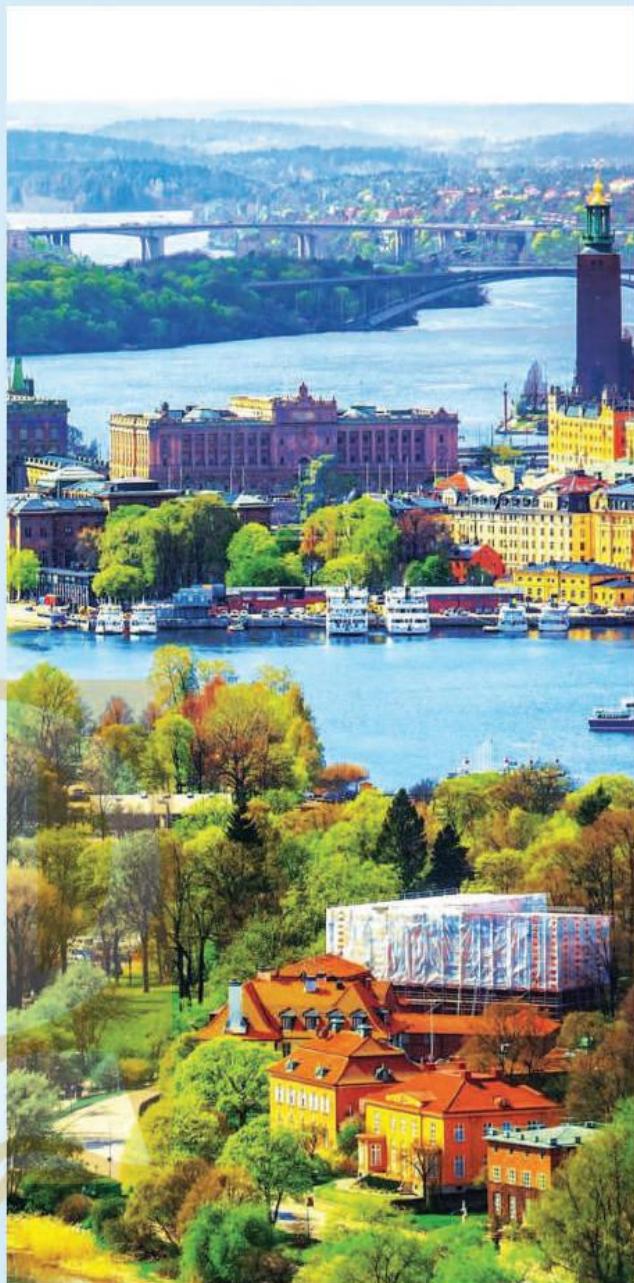

If you are tired of modern life and you want to contribute more to building a better planet for future generations, think about the following places. According to the Global Green Economy Index (GGEI) 2014 – a detailed assessment of the performance of each country in every continent in the global green economy – Germany and some Scandinavian countries ranked top of the list. The top five countries included Sweden, Norway, Costa Rica, Germany, and Denmark. In addition, the ten greenest cities were Copenhagen, Amsterdam, Stockholm, Vancouver, London, Berlin, New York, Singapore, Helsinki, and Oslo.

Green Stockholm, Sweden

Stockholm dwellers are fortunate to live in one of the greenest capitals in the world. And they try their best to keep it that way. The city is well known for its cycle paths and lanes full of commuters wearing helmets. For people who prefer public transport, there are buses and taxis that run on renewable energy, which is really good for the environment. Besides, both public and private transport can use upgraded biogas produced by waste-water treatment plants applying advanced technologies.

Visitors to Stockholm will be amazed to see that all hotels, hostels and guest houses are environmentally friendly and certified with eco-labels. It's so great that almost 100% of the household waste in the city is recycled and is used for heating and electricity; and drinking water is always of very high and reliable quality. There is no doubt to say that waste in Stockholm is converted into valuable resources. With the recycling revolution and effective waste management, Stockholm has been reducing the amount of waste to rubbish dump to less than 1%.

1. What are the top five countries and ten cities according to GGEI 2014?
2. How do Stockholmers travel around in the city?
3. How do Stockholmers make their public transport sustainable?
4. How do the people in Stockholm treat waste?

SKILLS

READING

Counter-urbanisation

- 1 Read the text about the causes and effects of counter-urbanisation.

While urbanisation has led to fast urban growth, counter-urbanisation has resulted in the opposite situation. Counter-urbanisation happens when a great number of people move from urban areas into rural areas.

This phenomenon is linked to the 'push' and 'pull' factors of migration. Trying to avoid overcrowded inner cities, city dwellers look for larger, cleaner and quieter houses with more land at cheaper prices in rural or suburban areas. They want to escape the air and noise pollution, and the crime in inner cities.

However, counter-urbanisation causes serious problems in the shrinking cities. These cities face severe economic strain and a sharp increase in poverty. Despite declining populations, they still have to spend money maintaining infrastructure, such as roads, sanitation, public transport, etc., built for a much larger population.

Meanwhile, villages in the countryside become increasingly urbanised, grow fast and soon lose their uniqueness and charm. Local prices go up because city migrants have more money. They earn money from well-paid city jobs and high-valued city properties. Villagers often find it more and more difficult to earn a living and provide for their families.

Counter-urbanisation has caused many negative effects. Governments should find urgent short-term solutions before implementing a long-term comprehensive programme to make life sustainable for people in both urban and rural areas.

- 2 Read the text again and decide whether the following statements are true (T), false (F), or not given (NG), and tick the correct box.

T	F	NG

- 1 Urbanisation and counter-urbanisation are two opposite trends.
- 2 City dwellers look for houses in rural or suburban areas just because they are cheap.
- 3 Shrinking cities still face high rates of crime.
- 4 When populations decline, cities spend less money on maintaining infrastructure.
- 5 Country villages quickly lose their unique character and charm when they become urbanised and grow fast.
- 6 Governments should offer immediate short-term solutions to make life sustainable for both urban and rural inhabitants.

1 Nam and Lan are talking about the use of mobile devices and the Internet. Listen and read.

Lan: Nam, just look around. All the people I see are on their smartphones or tablet PCs.

Nam: Yeah. Maybe they are chatting, sending messages or searching for news. I don't see many people reading print newspapers.

Lan: Remember Minh? He said his dad had reduced the number of subscribed print newspapers and magazines.

Nam: I'm not surprised! Everyone in his house can now read the news on their digital devices.

Lan: Did you mean Minh's grandpa can read online newspapers?

Nam: Yeah. He had already started using the computers in the local library to access the Internet when Minh's dad bought him a tablet PC four months ago.

Lan: That's interesting! Great to see that more and more older people are beginning to use new technologies.

Nam: Well, my grandparents and most of their friends still read print newspapers, listen to the radio, watch TV or DVDs. I think they may find it challenging to learn how to use the Net.

Lan: I agree, but they can always find someone to walk them through the process. I think the problem is that many older people may not understand the benefits of online information.

Nam: Yes, but once they start using the Internet they can also connect with friends and family members any time.

Lan: That's right. The benefits are enormous! I'd be lost without my social networking sites. It would be impossible for me to do my school projects without the Internet.

Nam: Personally, I think you are addicted to social media and rely too much on the Internet. You can still use other media such as print newspapers, magazines and books, or radio and television for different purposes.

The Internet: _____

- 2 Quickly read the text and choose the best heading.

- a. The history of print media
b. Forms of mass media
c. The advent of the Digital Media Age
d. Means of mobile communication

The mass media are means of communication, such as books, newspapers, recordings, radio, movies, television, mobile phones and the Internet, that can reach a large audience.

Although the first printed books had appeared long before in China, the term 'mass media' we use today was coined with the creation of print media, which started in Europe in the Middle Ages. This is also considered the first example of mass media due to the large number of readers then.

Since the mid-twentieth century new technologies have been developed, which helped to diversify mass media and make them an inseparable part of our lives. The role of the mass media is not only to entertain and amuse the masses. Its most important role is to provide information and news about events in different parts of the world as they occur. Educating people about their rights and responsibilities is another function of mass media.

Until recently, mass media forms were classified into six categories according to the sequence of their advent: print, recordings, cinema, radio, television and the Internet. Each form has its own characteristic content types, creative artists and business models. In the early 21st century, with the explosion of mobile communication technology, the mobile phone has emerged as a new and unique media channel. Video and computer games have also developed into a mass media form.

The Internet and mobile communication is now the most popular means of receiving information and interacting with people through email, instant messaging, apps, search engines, blogs, social networks and other services. Most print and broadcast media have a presence on the web by having video adverts or Quick Response Codes (QR Codes) that link to specific websites.

Each form of mass media has had an important impact on society, for example, books have helped people to educate themselves while newspapers have recorded daily events. Magazines were the first visual medium before the advent of television, which together with radio, brought entertainment and news programmes into people's homes. However, all these media had to change and adapt to the advent of the Internet and Digital Media Age. New digital media forms are more personal and social as they allow people to connect with each other, collaborate and share information and personalise their experiences.

3 Match each of the following words with its meaning. Use a dictionary if necessary.

Van: Yes. I'm not quite sure about how people express their cultural identity.

Mr Brown: That's an interesting question. Can anyone give some examples?

Lam: I think people can do that through the language they speak, the food they eat and ... certain styles of clothing. For example, some people still wear their traditional costumes so they can preserve their national identity.

Mr Brown: That's right. It can also be expressed by beliefs and cultural practices.

Yumi: Do you mean people's religious beliefs, music activities and festivals?

Mr Brown: Correct. Any other questions?

Lam: I wonder ... why people need to protect their cultural identity.

Yumi: You live here, in your motherland, so you can't see why this is important. But for me, a Japanese living in Viet Nam, it's essential to understand my family history and traditions.

Van: Interesting. Are your parents both Japanese, Yumi?

Yumi: Yes, but they've been living here for twenty years, and they're afraid that my sister and I are becoming less and less familiar with our traditions.

Lam: So how do you maintain your culture?

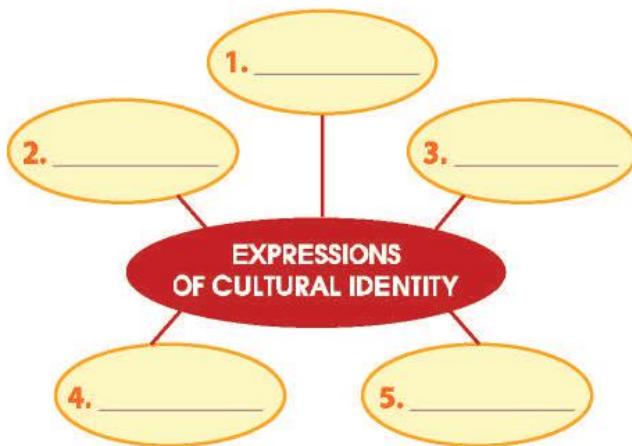

Yumi: Well, we wear kimonos on special occasions and celebrate Japanese festivals such as the cherry blossom festival. We also eat sushi, sashimi and udon noodles. At home we speak Japanese only.

Van: Do you often go back home?

Yumi: I've been to Kyoto four or five times to visit my grandparents. But to tell you the truth, I don't know whether Viet Nam or Japan is really my home. My parents are from Japan, but I was born and grew up here.

2. _____ are characteristics shared by individuals belonging to the same group or community.
3. When he studied abroad, he successfully _____ into the local culture.
4. His book covers all _____ of a migrant's life.

- 2 Read the passage about cultural identity. Four sentences have been removed from the passage. Choose a sentence (a-d) to complete each gap (1-4).

- a. On the other hand, there are people who choose to abandon their heritage culture and assimilate into the new culture of the majority.
- b. Cultural identity is usually understood as the identity or feeling of belonging to a group that has its own culture.
- c. However, people often do not confine themselves to one culture.
- d. The first stage, known as unexamined cultural identity, occurs during childhood, when culture is taken for granted.

There are various studies on cultural identity. (1) _____. Individuals usually define themselves by cultural identifiers such as nationality, ethnicity, location, history, language, gender, beliefs, customs, clothing and food.

It is suggested that cultural identity develops in three stages. (2) _____. Cultural ideas and values provided by families, communities or the media are easily accepted without much critical thinking. In the second stage, called the cultural identity search, teenagers may become more curious, and willing to explore, analyse and compare their beliefs with other cultures. When people develop a clear sense of cultural identity, know which social group they belong to and feel satisfied with their cultural identity, they reach the final stage called cultural identity achievement.

Living in their own country, people can easily acquire and maintain their cultural identity because they are fully exposed to different aspects of their native culture. They inherit their ancestors' history, knowledge, language, beliefs, values, and customs, which have been passed from one generation to the next one. (3) _____. In the age of globalisation, access to the Internet and the media provides instant contact with many cultures. A person's cultural identity may be influenced by certain aspects of other cultures.

When people move to a new culture, they may react differently. Some people feel a strong urge to keep their cultural identity, so they continue speaking their language, cooking their food, wearing their traditional clothing, and celebrating their festivals. They also insist that their children and grandchildren maintain their cultural identity. (4) _____. Yet, there are people who integrate into the new cultural environment while keeping their own cultural identity and flexibly adjusting to the different aspects of the new culture.

Festivals are celebrated to highlight the cultural heritage of nations. At national level, festivals help to strengthen the spirit of solidarity and unity of the whole nation. Regional festivals or festivals of an ethnic group, on the other hand, help to maintain the cultural identity of a community. Taking part in different activities of the festival, group members get together, have fun, and promote their cultural image. Examples can be found in well-known festivals of some ethnic groups in Viet Nam.

In March, the Elephant Racing Festival is held at Don Village, in Dak Lak Province, to promote the martial spirit of the M'Nong and Ede people, who are famous for their bravery in wild elephant hunting. Every year, more and more participants in colourful costumes flock to the area to watch the race and take part in other fun activities such as eating traditional food, drinking rice wine, dancing, and watching elephants play soccer.

Forest Worshipping is an important festival of the Nung and Dao people in Ha Giang and Lao Cai Provinces, which takes place in the first lunar month. People worship the god of trees and villagers who sacrificed their lives to protect the village. They also pray for good health, fruitful trees and favourable climate. The ceremony is held under an old tree in the forest, with a lot of agricultural products used as offerings. After the ceremony, local people sign a statement to protect forests and plant more trees around their houses. Finally, they take part in folk games with strong ethnic identity, such as blind man's buff, swinging, shuttlecock throwing, and tug of war.

READING

1 Read the text about advertising and the media.

Advertising and the mass media

Having the power to deliver information to large audiences at the same time, the mass media have naturally become ideal tools for advertising. This huge industry has reached and dominated almost all types of the mass media. Advertisements are everywhere, from broadcast media (the radio, television and films), Internet media (email, websites and blogs), print media (newspapers, magazines, books and comics), outdoor media (billboards, signs and placards) to digital media, which include Internet and mobile devices.

Advertising is beneficial to the mass media too. Companies and businesses are willing to spend millions, even billions of dollars, to influence customers' attitudes towards their ideas, services and products. Their advanced advertising methods and techniques are successful in persuading customers of all ages and genders, and turning luxuries into necessities. Because of the easy access to all forms of the media, information can reach every corner of the world instantly and cost-effectively. In addition, all media channels receive huge sums of money from advertisers, which allows them to make better and more interesting programmes and services for a large number of people worldwide.
